means is the maintenance of a high standard of work which our clients appreciate and which we have come to be respected for," continued the company Managing Director. ICE counts 10 qualified engineers with master and or Bachelors Degree level and above amongst its dedicated team of 27 employees.

"We thank them all for working to the strict demands we place on them to always maintain the very highest of standards," stated the ICE Managing Director. In that regard he is not as pessimistic as many about the traffic congestion and seemingly uncontrolled development of Dutch St. Maarten. "We have seen it in the past and we are seeing it again where we have a boom in construction and the development of the infrastructure is left behind, To me that is part of the island's development, once the balance is restored as soon as possible with good planning and with everyone on board with the same idea of what is needed," stated Mr. Daal.

In that respect he said ICE is prepared for the next phase in assisting the island in developing projects and contributing in improving the infrastructure in general.
